~ Wolves, Bears & Geysers ~

An Exclusive Michigan State University Yellowstone Expedition featuring Michigan DNR Specialist Kevin Frailey

May 19-24, 2012       Only $2195

As Yellowstone Lake begins to thaw, Canada goose goslings are hatching, grizzly bears are waking from a long winter's hibernation and the bison and elk calves are playing in the meadows. Witness the awesome power of the great bears and listen to the howling harmony of the gray wolf. It's Springtime in Yellowstone, the Serengeti of North America!

Join us on the premiere wildlife viewing adventure of the Rockies! You will be amazed as you witness the abundant wildlife and natural wonders of Yellowstone National Park. Whether you are a professional photographer, amateur naturalist or someone who just loves the beauty of nature - this ultimate wildlife extravaganza is for you!

Highlights:

• Travel into Yellowstone's premiere locations for wildlife viewing. Accompanied by a local expert naturalist, you may witness the awesome power of the magnificent grizzly and listen to the unmistakable howl of the gray wolf.

• Days will be spent in the field, observing and learning about wildlife behavior and ecology.

• Explore the major geyser basins and witness the ever-changing thermal activity and the spectacular colors of the hot springs and pools.

• Witness the sights and sounds of this remarkable region. Whether it is hundreds of bison and elk crossing vast valleys, or blasts of steam erupting from the many geysers, you will experience the real Yellowstone!
Michigan State University Host

Kevin Frailey has been involved in the Natural Resources field for more than 30 years and currently directs conservation education programs for the Michigan Department of Natural Resources. Kevin also spent five years directing education programs for the Idaho Department of Fish and Game visiting Yellowstone National Park numerous times. His knowledge of American wildlife and familiarity with Yellowstone National Park make him the perfect choice to lead this trip to the land of America’s greatest wildlife resources.
